Historical/Biographical Notes

Dr. Homer Gage (1861-1938) a successful Worcester physician, philanthropist, and industrialist, was the son of Dr. Thomas Hovey Gage (1826-1909), a Worcester physician. Homer Gage graduated cum laude from Harvard University in 1882 and acquired his Harvard MD in 1887. He became a general practitioner and later a surgeon. Gage married Mabel Reynolds Knowles (1869-1948) in 1893. Their only child was Homer Gage, Jr. (1895-1925). In 1923, Dr. Gage gave up medicine to assume the presidency of his brother-in-law's firm, Crompton & Knowles of Worcester. He became a civic leader and served on many Boards of various city institutions and organizations.

Dr. Homer Gage's brother, Thomas Hovey Gage, Jr. (1865-1938), was a successful Worcester attorney and civic leader. He graduated cum laude from Harvard in 1886 and earned a Harvard law degree in 1889. He worked for one year as secretary to Senator George Frisbie Hoar. He married Alice Chase (1865-1940) in 1898. Her papers are also included in this collection. They had one child, Mary Hovey Gage Rice. Thomas Hovey Gage also served with the U.S. Food Administration in Washington D.C. during World War I.

Scope and Content

This collection, 1861-1930, includes a letter to their father, Dr. Thomas Hovey Gage, in 1861 from Samuel Foster Haven (1806-1881) offering reimbursement for a trip to Washington, and many letters from colleagues and family concerning a possible offer to Thomas Hovey Gage, Jr., of a judgeship on the state Superior Court in 1909, as well as many letters relating to the ordering of a portrait of Chief Justice Arthur Prentice Rugg (1862-1938). There is a letter, 1914, from William Howard Taft (1857-1930) declining a request for a lecture. The collection also contains school report cards, bachelor, law, and medical degrees, Homer Gage's autograph book, 1874-75, and Alice Chase Gage's school essays and book of quotations. There are also letters of Thomas Hovey Gage, Jr., during his service as a counselor with the U.S. Food Administration during World War I, and many appointment certificates to institutional boards and law and medical commissions. There is also a letter from Harvard University granting a leave of absence to Homer Gage, Jr., in 1918, when he joined the army, and appointments to the French Legion of Honor.
