Biographical/Historical Information

Charles B. Campbell was a native of Worcester, and grew up on a farm on Salisbury Street in Worcester around 1900. He was a lawyer in Worcester, and served as Chairman of the Board of the Wachusett State Reservation Commission in the 1960s. In 1966 he was elected vice-president of the Worcester Historical Society.

Cow Tavern was an early 19th century tavern on the road from Worcester to Holden, the site now being the corner of Salisbury and Grove Streets.

Scope and Content

The collection consists of a letter from Charles B. Campbell to his granddaughter, written in 1978, with personal reminiscences of growing up on a farm in Worcester around 1900. The letter provides insight into rural Worcester life around the close of the 19th century. In addition the letter includes family history and biographical material about Campbell.

The collection also includes excerpts of articles and short historical sketches of Cow tavern, an early 19th century located at the intersection of Salisbury and Grove Streets, on the Worcester Holden Road.
