Historical/Biographical Notes

In the 1940's, the Friendly House mainly worked on having enough programs for school aged children. As the war came, the Friendly House was completely filled. During the 1950's, as the war came to an end, the primary focus for the friendly house hadn't changed. Kids would go there for after-school activities such as arts and crafts, cooking, sewing, and take trips to locations such as Fenway Park. In the 1970's, ground was broken for the New Friendly House. In 1983, an emergency shelter for homeless people was opened. In 1995 alone, the Friendly House aided over 25,000 residents.
