Historical/Biographical Notes

Union Church (1835 – 1936)

Officially organized by the Ecclesiastical Council of Worcester Central Association on February 3, 1836, the members first met in the Town Hall until the Meeting House was built and dedicated on June 20, 1836. It was located on Front and Church Street. It was remodeled and enlarged in 1845 and in 1861. In 1879, it was torn down. The second Union Church was dedicated on October 10, 1880. Fourteen years later, the building was sold in the interest of a new building and location. In February 1896, the cornerstone for the Second Union Church was laid on the Kinnicutt Estate on Chestnut Street.

On May 8, 1896 Union and Salem Street Church combined. Later, it merged with Plymouth and Piedmont Churches and became known as Chestnut Street Congregational Church.

Salem Street Congregational Church (1848 – 1896)

The fourth congregational church in Worcester was established on June 14, 1848 and had 130 members. In 1896, Salem Street and Union combined and the church was sold to the First Swedish Congregational Church.

Plymouth Church (1869 – 1936)

The first service of worship was held May 9, 1869 in Mechanics Hall and continued there for four years. On April 18, 1872, the congregation voted to build a church on the Brown lot, corner of Pearl and Chestnut Streets. Half the congregation did not support the location so they separated from the church to form Piedmont Church. The new building was dedicated on April 29, 1875. In 1936, it merged with Piedmont and Union Churches to become Chestnut Street Congregational.

Piedmont Church (1872 – 1936)

After splitting from Plymouth, the congregation decided on a new site for their church on the corner of Main and Piedmont Streets. They temporarily named themselves Seventh Congregational Church of Worcester, but later changed it to Piedmont Congregational Church. The first service was held in the new church on April 12, 1874. In 1936, it merged with Plymouth and Union Churches to become Chestnut Street Congregational Chestnut Street Congregational Church (1936 –

Came into being on July 1, 1936 when Plymouth, Piedmont and Union Congregational Churches merged into one organization. The new organization chose the Union Church on Chestnut Street as its home and the first services were held September 27, 1936 with 1137 members.

Central Congregational Church

Central Church was dedicated on October 11, 1885. The architect was Stephen C. Earle and the land on Institute Road was purchased from Stephen Salisbury III. The Romanesque revival building has a foundation of Fitzwilliam granite and the structure is Longmeadow brownstone. The contractor was Peter B. Johnson of Holyoke.

United Congregational Church

United Congregational Church, formerly Central Church, merged with Chestnut Street Congregational Church in 1982. From that point on, it was called United Congregational Church.
